

Ravine plan criticized

To slow erosion and allow workers access to a sewer line, city engineers are proposing to fill in a 900-foot-long ravine on Madison's West Side. Some residents object to the plan, which they say threatens to ruin the woody feel of the area.

State Journal